I noted that the effect upon my children was detrimental, and ordered the newsdealer not to deliver such papers. I wished to keep in touch with current events, but did not think it either consistent or fair to read myself that which I denied my children. When the Sunday edition of The Washington Herald made its appearance, almost entirely free from the objectionable features of other papers, you can readily understand that I became an appreciative sub-

The following paragraphs from an article, entitled "An Analysis of Modern Printing," by Henry Turner Bailey, in The Printing Art, for May, 1907, speaks the truth clearly and forcibly:

the truth clearly and forcibly:

The Sunday edition presents one of the most serious problems of our time. It is not my purpose to discuss it here; but in passing, let me say that all we can do in the public schools to develop in children a love of truth, a respect for the aged and for law, a belief in virtue and honor, reverence for womanhood, and for the great spiritual realities, an enjoyment of beauty, and a refined taste for literature and art, is opposed, vitiated, and sometimes, I am almost ready to say, mullified, by the Sunday papers. In the Sunday papers impudence is vraised, the bad boy is fortunate, the police are entwitted, the foreigner, the old, the law-abiding, the virtuous, are held up to ridicule. The things we revere are made the butt of every coarse joke. The drawings are usually the grossest of caricatures, and the colors are brutally crude. The incidents recorded are said to be "comic." "amasing." "funny." They are not; they rather tend to destroy the power to appreciate genuins wit and humor.

I do not forget other parts of the Sunday papers, where artists of talent and writers of ability contribute to the instruction and pleasure of adult readers. I lament chiefly the wretched stuff these papers provide for our children. It is simply vile. With all the wealth of fable, myth, folklore, historical adventure by land and sea; with all the wealth of modern literature, full of happy experiences and wholesome fun for children; with the modern facilities for reproducing effectively views from nature, pictures of merit, charming sketches drawn by skillful artists; with all this to draw from on the one hand, and, on the other, with all the increasingly efficient graduates of our art schools anxious for remunerative work, all, all at the disposal of newspaper syndicates, there seems to be absolutely no excuse for the stream of sewage in the Sunday papers.

Commissioners and Gas Question.

Editor The Washington Herald:

The honorable Commissioners have very recently informed an inquisitive citizen that they will renew their recommendation for 75-cent gas to the next Congress, "if that will afford a fair return" to the stockholders of the Washington Gaslight Company. "A fair return" on what? On amount actually invested by the stockholders, or on such sum and franchise value and water? The time has arrived when the Commissioners should make a specific recommendation.

York Independent of June 27:

Washington gas monopoly has continually schemed to manipulate things in such manner as to forever prevent a fair reduction in this city.

Almost needless to say, the felt to be derived from the picture supplements of the Sunday papers is more than dubious, while the positive disadvantages see easy to appreciate at one. These crade pictures, body drawn, buridly colored, with little or no meaning to them at best, and often meanings that are not good for children at worst, cannot help but vittate taste and deprave intelligence. It does not seem quite the proper thing that children should be shown the humer of playing that claims about the worst and friends, relatives and across the manner as to forever prevent a fair reduction in this city.
